Chapter 153: The Blessings of Necromancy

The God of Shadows and Life, Sung Jin-Woo, bestowed his blessings upon the devoted monks and priests of the Temples of Shadows and Life. Through the system, these faithful followers were granted extraordinary skills, allowing them to channel a fragment of his shadow abilities into their own powers. With these blessings, the monks and priests became not only spiritual leaders but also powerful necromancers, capable of commanding armies of shadows.

Shadow Necromancy Skills

Under Sung Jin-Woo's guidance, the monks and priests learned the art of shadow necromancy, a sacred skill that allowed them to extract shadows from the souls of the deceased. These extracted shadows could then be preserved and utilized as shadow soldiers, serving as their protectors and warriors.

The strength and number of shadow soldiers a monk or priest could command depended on their level:

Level 5: Able to preserve up to 10 shadow soldiers.

Level 50: Command a modest force of 500 soldiers.

Level 100: Lead an army of thousands of shadow soldiers, equivalent to an SSS-Rank Hunter or a National Level Hunter.

Level 120: Command even more powerful forces, with strength equivalent to an S^5-Rank Hunter.

As the monks and priests ascended in level, their connection to the shadows deepened, and they gained access to additional abilities:

1. Shadow Exchange: The ability to teleport instantly to any of their shadow soldiers or allies within their network.

2. Stealth: A skill that allowed them to blend seamlessly into their surroundings, becoming nearly invisible.

3. Telekinesis: The power to manipulate objects and enemies from a distance using shadow energy.

The Gift of Eternal Life

The most devout and skilled monks and priests, those who reached Level 200, were bestowed with the ultimate gift: the Water of Eternal Life. This divine potion, crafted in the Potion Factory, granted unparalleled regenerative abilities and could heal any wound, cure any illness, and even restore life to those on the brink of death. It was a symbol of their unwavering faith and devotion to the God of Shadows and Life.

The Rising Influence of the Temples

With these blessings, the Temples of Shadows and Life grew in both power and influence. The monks and priests became a formidable force, not only spreading Sung Jin-Woo's teachings but also acting as protectors of the realms. They were no longer mere spiritual guides; they were warriors of the shadows, tasked with upholding the divine will of their god.

The shadow soldiers under their command were not just lifeless minions; they were imbued with fragments of the God of Shadows and Life's power, making them resilient and loyal. These soldiers served as extensions of the monks' and priests' will, protecting the temples, defending the faithful, and spreading the influence of Sung Jin-Woo across the multiverse.

A New Era of Devotion

The blessings of necromancy solidified Sung Jin-Woo's position as the most exceptional member of the Divine Triad. His creativity, combined with his unparalleled power, allowed him to create an ever-expanding network of faith and military strength.

As the monks and priests continued to grow in power, so too did the reach of the God of Shadows and Life. His teachings spread like wildfire, and the Temples of Shadows and Life became centers of both worship and military might. Through their newfound abilities, the faithful ensured that Sung Jin-Woo's legacy would endure for eternity, an unyielding testament to his divine rule.
